Michelin-starred chef Tom Kerridge brings you the best of British food

"I'm not a Michelin-star kind of guy" – says acclaimed chef Tom Kerridge who, since opening his first gastropub in 2005, has earned not one, but two of the coveted culinary accolades. The famed Hand & Flowers in Marlow is now known as the first ever pub to be given such recognition; but for Kerridge, prestige comes second to serving up simple, authentic and delicious British food – the kind that delights top critics and self-proclaimed foodies alike.

Our Tom Kerridge food range, created by the chef himself, is the ultimate selection of favourite pub classics given a contemporary twist. From a choice of gourmet sandwiches to the perfect slow-cooked steak and ale pie – paired with a selection of finest drinks – expect a fusion of top-quality ingredients and lots of great, traditional British flavours. Aeroplane food doesn't get much better than that.

Tapas king

Known as the 'Godfather of Spanish Cooking', José Pizarro first brought his culinary talents to London over 20 years ago. Since then, José has been sharing the wonderful flavours and ingredients from Spain. In 2014 he was voted one of top 100 Españoles, a global showcase of Spaniards who have brought their talents to a worldwide audience.
